categories.

Those categories are: recommendations that require some funding but not a bond issue; recommendations that require little or no funding; and recommendations which require a bond issue.

Recommendations by the committee which required a bond issue, were replaced by an administrative plan to construct elementary school as top priority.

However, McCullough noted that this would not be the administration's recommendation if the student enrollment rate dropped.

McCullough said the number of students enrolled in the system in the past three years has dropped by 154.

He also noted possible action by the Mississippi Legislature concerning compulsory education and implementation of a kindergarten program.

McCullough said a new elementary school would not be needed if a kindergarten program was not approved by the legislature and the enrollment rate continued to decline.

If compulsory education was passed and a kindergarten program was also, then the system would not need a new elementary school, he said.

Lana Noonan, a member of the assessment committee appealed to the trustees at the end of the meeting to consider curriculum changes before ranking a new elementary school as a priority.

"We can implement a lot of programs with what we have," Noonan said. Noonan's comments followed comments by Nell Woodall, fifth grade reading teacher at North Bay and a member of the assessment committee.

Woodall noted the 'high' drop out rate in the junior high and high school level. She said there is a need for a vocational education program at the junior high and high school level.

She argued implementation of a program would help keep those students not interested in college from dropping out.

"As long as this (the current program) continues, we are letting down 30 to 40 percent of the students who are supposed to be preparing for life," Woodall said.

Woodall also attributed the drop out rate to the problems with students' inability to read.

She related this to her classroom experience where she said 40 to 50 percent of her students were not reading at grade level.

Of that percent, Woodall said, 50 percent will go on to junior high. Board members James Ginn recommended the students who were not reading at grade level be held back.

Bob Warner, a member of assessment committee, noted a disciplinary problem with keeping students in a classroom with a 'seven year spread' in age.

Woodall said she has a 'young man who has been retained in my class two years...and he is not passing now.' She said fifth grade teachers decided last year to begin holding students back.

She stated teachers were 'discouraged' in the past from holding students back.

"Last year we got together and decided we would start holding students back regardless," she said.

But she said this only applied to fifth grade teachers and "it needs to be done at the first grade level."

Ginn asked who was discouraging holding students back. Woodall said she did not know but I understand it was the administration but I don't know for sure.

Woodall and Noonan both suggested that hiring a curriculum specialist be considered a number one priority in the category 'recommendations which require some funding but not a bond issue.'

The administration listed that recommendation third. Establishing a gifted program beginning with the first through fifth grades was ranked number one by the administration.

Beginning a required reading class in seventh grade was ranked second. In regard to the assessment committee recommendation to design a curriculum for those students not pursuing a vocational program, the administration report responded, "We agree in principle with this recommendation, but we feel that we would need a curriculum specialist working very closely with the academic teachers, vocational teachers, and the State Department of Education to design such a curriculum."

"They lost everything," he said. Firloux attributed the fire to an electrical short circuit caused by a nail driven through paneling which struck an electrical wire.

Firloux said the nail was apparently driven into the wall some time ago.

WEDNESDAY FIRE
A fire Wednesday, reported at 9:59 p.m. on Lusher Avenue in Lakeshore, totally destroyed an abandoned mobile home.

Firloux said the home was part of the estate of the late Frank Firloux.

"We know it was arson," Firloux said.

He said the fire is currently under investigation but would not comment on any leads or suspects in the case.

The East Hancock Volunteer Fire Department and the arson squad responded to the scene.

"The trailer was fully involved (with flames) when we got there," he said.

WEDNESDAY BLAZE
An abandoned house on St. Anthony Street in Waveland received minor damage Wednesday after the Waveland Fire Department responded to contain the blaze reported at 8:40 p.m.

Firloux said a transient was living in the house and was cooking inside on a barbecue pit.

He was cooking in a little tin pan and a gas burner was too close to the fire, Firloux said.

The fire caught fire and the fire department arrived. All of the house, Firloux said.

They did an excellent job of containing the fire, he said, about the Waveland Fire Department.

He estimated the damage to be $500. Two transient were not apprehended and Firloux said there is no lead.

It's one of nature's most perfect designs: the egg. All that the next generation needs is "stored" within, including food, air, and genetic blueprints. For most of the egg-born — the birds, the amphibians, the reptiles, the insects — life's first problem is how to get out.

Getting out, growing up, fighting for food, mating, and dying are some of the stages of life in the wild revealed in a new book of photographic essays, A Wildlife Family Album, published in time for Christmas giving by the National Wildlife Federation.

The book's 190 full-color photographs by professional wildlife photographers are captioned by David Robinson, naturalist and author. The photographs chosen for the book are the best in the NWF's 20-year collection and represent thousands of hours of arduous camera-work.

While the often astounding photographs are the star attractions of A Wildlife Family Album, Robinson's accompanying text is filled with surprising, little-known facts which help the reader understand what he's seeing.

For example, photographer Rajesh Bedi's camera caught a gharial, a long-snouted Indian reptile, just as its head poked through its egg.

Robinson explains, "The gharial egg, unlike bird eggs, must not be turned over."

Scientists studying this endangered member of the crocodile family always mark the top of the egg as they lift it from the sand and keep it upright. This precaution keeps the reptile inside from breaking away from the life-saving spot in the yolk which serves as its umbilical cord."

Other egg facts from A Wildlife Family Album — all of which are illustrated with photographs — include:

— Unlike the gharial egg, ostrich eggs must be turned. The mother ostrich does this so the embryo won't stick to one side of the shell's inside wall and, to ensure that all sides receive an equal amount of heat, so the chick will develop evenly.

— An eared grebe may build as many as five nests per season, filling each with eggs and then abandoning all but one. The many deserted eggs help keep predators away from the one nest that counts.

— Greater flamingo parents take turns sitting on their eggs in order to keep them close to incubating temperature of 93 degrees Fahrenheit. "Yet so skittish are greater flamingos," Robinson writes, "that a pair will abandon their precious annual egg if invaded by larger relatives, the marabou storks."

A Wildlife Family Album is available for $14.95 plus $1.15 handling charge per order from the National Wildlife Federation, 1958 DV, 1412 16th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. After January 1, 1982, the price will increase to $16.95.

Marshall receives NASA service award

William R. (Bob) Marshall, director of Program Development at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's George C. Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., was recently awarded the NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal for significant contributions to the success of the first Space Shuttle mission.

Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Marshall of Bay St. Louis, was presented the medal by NASA Administrator James M. Beggs at a special ceremony at the space center.

The medal is given for "notably outstanding leadership which has had a pronounced effect upon the aerospace technological or administrative programs of NASA."

The citation accompanying the medal honored Marshall for "superior contributions in the design and development of major flight projects, and for dedication, skill, and leadership in the pursuit of NASA's goals and objectives."

The space flight center was responsible for the development and testing of the Space Shuttle main engines, external tank and solid rocket boosters.

In the nomination for the medal, Marshall was cited for his ability to "invoke cooperation and a team spirit in the pursuit of space systems concepts which can be evolved into flight projects."

The program development directorate which Marshall heads is responsible for the concept and definition of future programs at the center.

In the 1960s and '70s, Marshall was chief engineer of the Saturn V, which launched the first manned missions to the Moon. For his role in the development of the Moon rocket, he was awarded the NASA Exceptional Service Medal in 1969.

Marshall received a Ph.D. in Science from the University of Mississippi in 1959, and a master's degree in 1961. He is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

He is married to the former Betty Rees of Watts, Okla. They live in Madison, Ala., and they have three children named Debra Kay, Carol Lynn and William Rees.

When will the illegal dumping stop on Webb Street?

It is amazing how an area that is not supposed to be a dump has so much garbage, debris, and trash. Of course, the place we are talking about is the Webb Street Dump in Bay St. Louis.

It is our understanding the area has been closed to dumping not once or twice, but numerous times and dumping continues. If you doubt our word, take a drive down Webb Street and you can see for yourself the disgraceful sight.

We can remember, not many months ago, when the City of Bay St. Louis had pushed all the garbage and trash back into the holes, and it was nice and clean along Webb Street.

It did not take too long for the area to again become cluttered with everything under the sun.

It seems to us something should be done to completely eliminate the dumping on Webb Street. A couple good fines may be the answer.

The area is not isolated or down an abandoned road, it is next to an attractive residential section of Bay St. Louis. Just think of how many people live in Spanish Acres Subdivision.

The residents of Bay St. Louis pay a monthly fee to have their garbage and properly contained trash picked up. There should not be a necessity for residents to have to dispose of their own garbage, yet it is strewn all over the place at the Webb Street Dump.

Many residents of Bay St. Louis are complaining about illegal dumping in the Webb Street area.

The State Board of Health is supposed to be doing something to help Bay St. Louis put a final clamp on the dump, but you know how promises go sometimes.

The illegal dumping still seems to be taking place.

Enactment of classification of property for ad valorem tax purposes by the Legislature would in effect "destroy the state's economic climate and be a step backward in the state's efforts toward economic improvement," according to the Mississippi State Council.

Classification of property places different assessment ratios on property according to its use which "completely removes equity in property taxation," said MEC Chairman W. W. Gresham Jr.

The Indianapolis businessman said that MEC has long opposed classification because it will establish as state policy the granting of preferential treatment to one segment of the economy at the expense of another.

"You can be sure that this preferential treatment message will be heard by industrial prospects and others interested in making economic investments in the state," he said.

Most classification schemes would place residential, agricultural, and forest land at the lowest rate; railroads, rail property, businesses, and all property not otherwise classified at a higher rate; and public utilities at the highest rate.

Gresham pointed out that several other states have tried a system of classification of property for ad valorem tax purposes and that Mississippi should learn from their mistakes.

"When Minnesota first adopted a classification system, it used three classes of property along the same lines that has in the past been proposed in Mississippi," he said. "Now Minnesota has 17 classes. The creation of additional classes simply depends on which group of taxpayers has the political clout in a particular year to arrange for a different, favored classification."

Specifically, MEC opposes classification for several reasons. They are:

—Classification is discriminatory because a property tax advantage would be given to one segment of the economy at the expense of another.

—Classification shifts the burden of taxation to another segment of society—usually to business property. Because increased business costs are inevitably passed on to the consumer, individual taxpayers begin supporting a heavier tax burden. Indirectly, through increased prices of goods and services.

—Classification erodes the tax base as it likens property tax to an income tax based upon ability to pay. As this happens, more and more pressure will be brought to change the system, to give additional preferential treatment to the politically strong at the expense of the politically weak.

Multiple sclerosis state chairman explains effects of deadly disease

The Sea Coast Echo
P.O. Box 230
Bay St. Louis, Miss. 39020

Dear Editor:

Multiple sclerosis is a disease of the central nervous system.

MS persons generally are diagnosed from age 15 to 50. Often it is a disability of young adults, many of them young parents of their prime family-forming and career-building years.

We don't know what causes it and we don't know how to cure it. We often point out just when you're starting to live, MS can strike.

What happens in MS is that nerve messages linking the brain to various parts of the body get blocked or scrambled. People with MS can often neither walk properly, talk without garbling their words, see clearly, and they get tired easily—especially in hot weather.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society is the only national voluntary health agency supporting research, nationally and internationally, to find a cause and cure for MS and the Mississippi Chapter in Jackson is its officially recognized Mississippi affiliate.

Since its founding in 1946, the society has allocated over $60 million to research and research fellowships.

We turn to you to help us raise public awareness of MS and its impact on the lives of our fellow Mississippians.

Sincerely,
Richard L. Sacks
Chairman

HOUSE DELVES INTO LEGISLATIVE VARIETY

Variety was the order of the week in Washington as the U.S. House dove into all sorts of issues, from American enterprise to foreign aid.

In between, we also took action on tourism and gave serious consideration to ways of improving our civil defense program.

Near the head of the list of my interests was a resolution I had introduced of American enterprise day. Similar to a measure passed last year, the resolution called for a special day for recognition for the invaluable contributions of free enterprise to our quality of life.

I pointed out that an "enterprise" is a difficult or risky project of a business nature, undertaken by daring individuals. Free enterprise is the cornerstone of our society and has produced the highest standard of living in the world.

The resolution, which passed unanimously, allows us to work for a day and take stock of the fact that private enterprise has made our country better for individuals, business and labor.

FOREIGN AID

The House Leadership continued consideration of the State Department authorization bill last week. A bill I had a hand in drafting the week before.

The two-year authorization bill came to the floor at least $60 million over the President's budget request.

Now I've asked to cut money from foreign aid for years and I'm not about to change, especially when the bill is so excessive, unrealistic and unjustified.

The fact of the matter is this:

Our fight against deficit spending, wasteful spending and excessive spending has included defense and domestic programs. It must also include foreign aid and the State Department.

I plan to continue to oppose what I consider to be wasteful, excessive spending for foreign affairs.

TOURISM

The House adopted a conference report on the national tourism policy act, which is an effort to coordinate promoting of U.S. tourism.

Tourism ranks as one of the top three industries in 48 states, accounting for approximately $116 billion annually. A disjointed approach to promoting America's assets to people in other countries had been the case in the past because too many agencies were involved. The new act would streamline the program and encourage foreign visitors to come to America on their vacations.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Our civil defense program was the subject of increased consideration by Members of Congress, especially in view of the fact that the Soviet Union has taken extensive precautions in the area over the past 15 years. As pointed out in remarks, the U.S. can develop effective civil defense plans with a renewed federal commitment.

We need an effective partnership between local and federal governments to prepare our communities to survive any disaster or armed conflict and believe civil defense must again become an integral component in strategic debate.

Bits 'n pieces

Firefighters gave a sigh of relief with the nice shower Monday night. Woods fires have been numerous in recent weeks with several homes being destroyed.

Everyone is talking about how dry the woods are, and the rain which fell Monday night will not be around very long.

We hope everyone will continue to be extremely careful with fires. There have been far too many this year.

Chamber members attending the annual banquet and installation of officers will have an opportunity to hear Lt. Gov. Brad Dye Saturday night.

We congratulate our friend Louis Breaux on his being elected president of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

L.J. will do a good job as president and we are sure he will receive great support from John Seafide Jr., vice-president, and Dick Thomas, treasurer, as well as the board of directors and chamber membership.

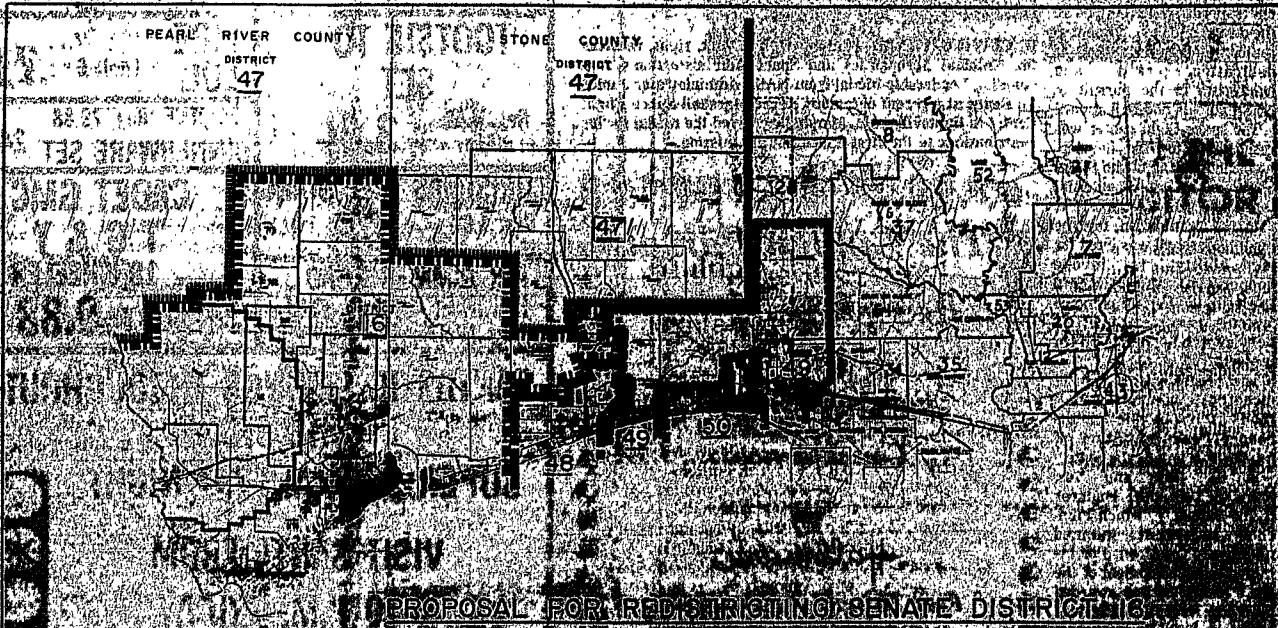

Many of the residents of Hancock County were shocked at the drowning of Natalie Wood who starred in "This Property is Condemned."

The movie, with much of it being shot in the old business section of Bay St. Louis near the depot in 1966, created a lot of interest.

Quite a few of the residents of the area had walk-on roles in the film.

We know Polly Mazarakis, a former co-worker will always remember her dancing scene.

Just think, the majority of the buildings used in the filming are still standing today, the big change is the fact that the railroad bridge is now concrete.

PROPOSAL FOR REDUCING SENATE DISTRICTS

SENATOR DISTRIBUTE PROPOSAL

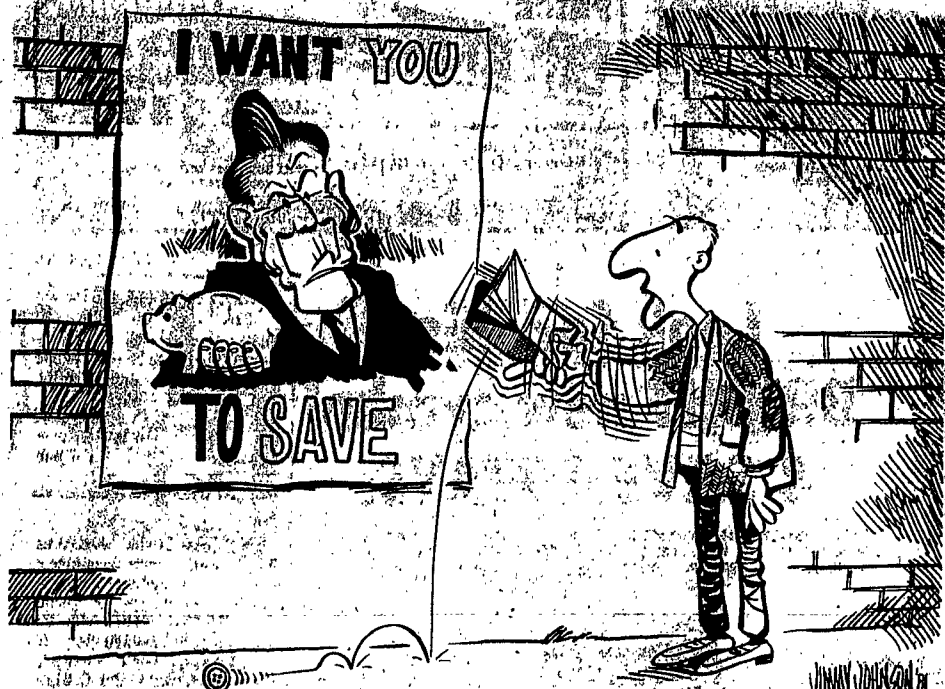

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and the Hancock County Board of Supervisors will present a proposal to the Mississippi State Senate to reduce the number of Senate districts from 27 to 21.

The proposal is based on the fact that the current number of districts is too large and that the reduction would result in more effective representation of the people of the state.

The proposal is being presented to the Senate in the form of a resolution and is being supported by a coalition of business and civic leaders in Hancock County.

The resolution calls for the creation of 21 Senate districts, each with a population of approximately 100,000 people.

Tuition tax credits proposal defeated in Washington, D.C.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following report on tuition tax credit proposals was released by the Mississippi Association of Educators in Jackson.

The proposed tuition tax credits measure, on Nov. 3 ballot in Washington, D.C. went down to overwhelming defeat as voters turned out in far larger numbers than was anticipated to defeat the measure by a margin of nearly 9 to 1.

This vote has national significance. Twelve times in the last 14 years voters have had an opportunity to vote on a tax credit or voucher proposal and in every case they have rejected the concept.

The defeat of tuition tax credits is a victory for public education. The defeat of tuition tax credits is a victory for public education.

on public education funding. Were the current tuition tax credits proposal introduced by Senators Moynihan and Packwood to pass, a new government expenditure of up to $7 billion a year would be created to funnel public money to private and parochial schools.

This would add $500 a year to the level of government support for each private school student, a level of subsidy outrageously out of line with the level of support for each public school student.

The national government last year provided just $158 for each public school student and the Reagan administration, already having achieved a 10 percent cut in that level of support, is working hard now to make that a 37 percent reduction.

Mississippi Association of Educators (MAE) Executive Director Dr. Tony Rollins, in commenting on tuition tax credits, said, "With approximately 28 percent of the funding for public education in Mississippi coming from federal sources, the effects of a tuition tax credit scheme would severely handicap the educational opportunities for the children of our state. We are encouraged by the action of the Washington, D.C. voters on this crucial issue."

"Tuition tax credits are a bad idea whose time should never come," stated NEA President Willard McGuire. "They are unsound economically, educationally and constitutionally and have been rejected by the voters every single time they have been proposed for a vote in the last 14 years.

"The public schools have long been the foremost strength of our nation, educating all Americans and providing all with a real opportunity for liberty, justice and the pursuit of happiness."

"Tuition tax credits would undermine all of that. It is gratifying that the voters of our nation's capital saw that clearly and spoke out strongly in the way it counts most—at the ballot box."

"This crushing defeat makes the point clearly: tuition tax credits to aid private and parochial schools are a bad idea and one that the public rejects. It is now up to all of us to make certain that message is not lost on the members of Congress," Rollins stated.

Commission survey predicts adequate natural gas supplies

A survey of the nation's major interstate natural gas pipeline companies and their wholesale customers by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission staff projects no significant disruption of natural gas service or supply, even if this winter is colder than normal.

The staff report is an analysis of the winter gas supply for the 28 pipeline companies that transport 99 percent of the natural gas used in interstate commerce.

The pipeline companies anticipate natural gas supplies of 6.141 billion cubic feet available for the winter heating season, November 1981 through March 1982, an increase of 103 billion cubic feet or two percent over actual deliveries the previous year.

This temporary surplus represents continued reduction in demand for natural gas because of conservation, a sluggish economy and price competition from alternate fuels, such as fuel oil and coal.

Projections are based on survey responses from the pipeline companies regarding anticipated gas supply, storage operations and inventory, emergency purchases, requirements and curtailment levels.

Fourteen pipeline companies project no curtailment of their customers during the 1981-82 winter season.

Another five pipeline companies project curtailment of only interruptible contract customers, and nine companies project curtailment of firm contract customers during the coming winter season.

Eight companies project a surplus of available supplies for the winter over current requirements.

If the winter weather is substantially colder than the coldest weather pattern used in the survey, some disruption of industrial natural gas supplies could be expected. The coldest weather pattern used in the survey is based upon ten percent colder weather than normal during November and March and 20 percent colder than normal during December, January and February.

Alternate fuels, however, are generally expected to be available throughout the country without some unforeseen event, such as a shut-off of oil imports, an interruption of liquefied natural gas imports or long periods of unusually cold weather which can affect transportation systems.

Bergeron explains company restructuring, promotions

William J. Bergeron, president of Bergeron Industries, Inc. in St. Bernard, La. reports a restructuring of the company.

"As a result of the restructuring, certain financial, administrative, sales and technical functions have been reassigned into a parent corporation with shipyard activities remaining at operating subsidiary levels," Bergeron explains. The company currently operates shipyard facilities at Braithwaite, La., and Port Bienvenue Industrial Park through subsidiary companies designated as Bergeron Shipyard, Inc., and Bergeron Marine, Inc., respectively. A third shipyard, known as Bergeron Barges, Inc., is under construction in Demopolis, Ala.

In conjunction with restructuring, Bergeron also announced several promotions within the parent company's management structure.

Gerard Andre Lagarde, formerly treasurer of the company's Louisiana and Mississippi operations, has been promoted to the position of senior vice president of the parent company. In addition, Lagarde was elected to the Board of Directors of the parent company.

Lagarde has been employed by the Bergeron firm since 1974. A graduate of Southeastern Louisiana University, he is a certified public accountant and a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Ira V. Michel Jr., formerly vice-president of production of the company's Louisiana and Mississippi operations, has been promoted to the position of vice president — Special Projects of the parent company. His responsibilities will include the international manufacturing operations. Michel has been employed by Bergeron since 1973. He was previously associated with the maritime industry at the Port of New Orleans.

Joseph E. Ingraham, formerly controller of the company's Louisiana and Mississippi operations, has been promoted to the position of treasurer of the parent company.

Ingraham has been employed by the Bergeron firm since 1978. A certified public accountant, he is a graduate of Loyola University of the South. Ingraham is also a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Bergeron also reports additions to and promotions in the management groups of certain of the company's subsidiary shipyard operations.

Ralph E. Ryan has been retained as vice president and general manager of the company's shipyard and machine shop operations located at Braithwaite and Poydras, La., respectively. Ryan brings 20 years of shipyard experience to Bergeron Shipyard, including his most recent tenure as president of a major east coast shipyard.

"We are most pleased to welcome such a talented and experienced individual to our staff," Bergeron stated. "We are confident the mixture of Ryan's shipbuilding experience with our unique position in the industry will further insure our continued success and growth."

Jack D. Golemon, formerly yard manager of the company's shipyard facilities at Port Bienvenue, has been promoted to the position of vice president and general manager of Bergeron Marine, Inc.

Golemon has served as yard manager of Bergeron Marine following his initial assignment as general superintendent at commencement of the Port Bienvenue plant's operations in 1977.

Before joining Bergeron,

Golemon was employed for 13 years with shipyards in the Gulf South area.

Bergeron adds, "Golemon has been instrumental in constructing the yard facilities, assembling a loyal, productive work force and delivering more than 160 new vessels in the yard's relatively brief period of operations."

He has also supervised the renovation of more than four hundred LASH barges in that same time span."

John J. Murphy has been retained as vice president and general manager of the company's newest shipyard facility, Bergeron Barges.

Having served as project manager during the initial phase of the construction of the new yard, Murphy adds to the Bergeron group 31 years of experience with shipyards in Europe, Canada, and the United States.

A naval architect who earned his degree from Belfast College of Technology, he will assume responsibility for a modern barge-building facility.

"We feel strongly that Murphy's background in managing complex, high technology projects — combined with the highly sophisticated facilities we are installing in Demopolis — will produce the most efficient hopper and tank barge construction plant in the United States," Bergeron states.

"These staff changes will strengthen the company's commitment to providing competitive prices and timely deliveries of a wide variety of barges to its customers," Bergeron adds.

SPANISH ACRES DRAINAGE WORK—Hancock County and Bay St. Louis workers clear brush from a drainage ditch near Spanish Acres subdivision off Third Street in Bay St. Louis recently. Beat Four Supervisor Sam Pernicelli said a tractor will follow the crew and will dig out dirt which washed into the drainage ditch and blocked water flow. Barrier island destruction cited by federation exec

The National Wildlife Federation is calling for an end to federal subsidies which encourage 'destructive and often foolhardy' development of the nation's fragile barrier islands.

Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the NWF, made that appeal in testimony at a recent Senate Environmental Pollution Subcommittee hearing.

He spoke in support of S. 1018, a bill which would eliminate federal assistance for beach stabilization and construction of waste water treatment plants, roads, and bridges on the sandy, shifting offshore islands.

"Coastal barriers begin to disintegrate when we try to put permanent structures on them, destroying themselves and their dependent fish and wildlife resources," Hair explained.

"With its subsidies, grants, and insurance programs, the federal government not only allows this destructive and often foolhardy development, but actually underwrites, encourages, and perpetuates it," he notes.

Barrier islands must be in constant flux in order to remain in equilibrium with the immense power of the ocean, he said. When the islands are stabilized and developed with resort homes and other man-made works, "the ecosystem — which depends on the islands' ability to shift and change — is destroyed."

Dependent on a healthy barrier island ecosystem are such threatened and endangered species as loggerhead turtles, bald eagles, brown pelicans, and sea otters, as well as the millions of migrating birds and waterfowl that use the islands' bays and marshes as resting and feeding areas.

Barrier islands are also an important recreational resource for all Americans and they are vital as storm buffers, the NWF official says.

In addition, up to 80 percent of the most important sport and commercial fish and shellfish species depend for their existence on the estuaries and wetlands provided by the islands and barrier beaches.

Hair estimates that between 1975 and 1980 the federal government spent nearly $750 million on barrier island development. "By subsidizing the higher costs and greater risks associated with barrier island development, the federal government has interfered with the normal working of the market place," he cites. "S. 1018 recognizes we must redirect federal investments away from the shifting sands of coastal barrier islands. In times of fiscal austerity, there are better ways to spend federal funds than on subsidized destruction of these fragile outposts," Hair concludes.

U.S. launched first space vehicle twenty years ago

Twenty years ago this Fall the Marshall Space Flight Center launched the first of its long string of Saturn rockets from Cape Canaveral, Fla. It, like the 31 that were to follow, was a spectacular success.

But there was something very special about the first one in October, 1961.

The national anticipation was great. The space program was a grand new adventure — man had only that year made his first personal venture into that realm — and the U.S. had, in the eyes of some, been "humiliated" by the excellent feats of Russian launch vehicles more powerful than we had.

What we needed was a "super-rocket." And the Werner von Braun group at Huntsville had been given the challenge and money to build one.

But nobody had ever built a rocket like this, a cluster of rocket engines and tanks all tied together and expected to function as a whole. As always, there was a minority of cynics who said it couldn't be done. "Cluster's last stand," the skeptics called it.

Friday, Oct. 27, 1961, was one of those "bright blue days of October" that the poets write about. It was a fair, warm day for the hundreds of viewers on the sands of Cape Canaveral as SA-1 (Saturn I, Block I) lifted off at 9:05 a.m. No matter that only the booster stage was "live," that the upper stages and payload of the 162-foot tall rocket were water ballasted dummies, whose main purpose was to provide an aerodynamic shape.

The object of the test was to prove that eight rocket engines and nine tanks from existing basic designs could be strung together and made to function uniformly to provide a launch vehicle four times more powerful than any the U.S. had ever flown.

And function it did in a spectacular way. Recalls Alex McCool, a present-day Marshall employee whose service, like some 800 others, dates back to that time:

"It was truly a flawless launch, culminating three years of hard work designing and testing."

McCool, now director of the Structures and Propulsion Lab, was not the only one from Marshall who viewed the launch. Many went to assist their Marshall Center brothers and sisters in preparing the rocket — at that time the launch group was still a part of Marshall.

McCool watched the launch from a radar building three miles away. Other watchers included 120 news people, which was a goodly number for that day.

Not all of the spectators remained dry-eyed. They cried for joy in an emotional, watershed experience.

Only two holds occurred in the 600-minute countdown, and neither of them was of a hardware nature. They were to allow the passage of drifting cloud layers which would have interfered with visual tracking and observation of the in-flight vehicle.

"It was quite an opportunity for me, and several of us from Marshall. We were so excited to see 'our bird' lift-off," McCool said last week.

"The Saturn I launch broke a long standing history of problems on the first flight of American rockets," recalled S. F. Morea of the Structures and Propulsion Lab.

Morea was a member of the Marshall engineering team that worked on the development of the Saturn vehicle's H-1 rocket engine. "It really broke the so-called 'first-launch jinx' that had existed. From then on we were convinced we could do it right the first time out, and we did."

The credit for the success of that launch lies in the teamwork and developmental testing conducted at Marshall," stated McCool. "We were able to perfect the vehicle and resolve the majority of the problems that could develop before we actually launched the vehicle."

"We were confident of the engines," said Morea. "The H-1 engine was a descendant of the S-3 family of engines that were used in the Atlas, Thor and Jupiter vehicles. Rocketdyne made several improvements, and provided the 165,000 pound, thrust engines." Acceptance testing of the Saturn Vehicle began in the fall of 1958. "Some of the preliminary work was done when we were members of Marshall Center's predecessor Army organization at Redstone," stated McCool. "But, the development and testing of the vehicle rested solely on the engineers of the new Marshall Center."

"What we were attempting to build had not been done anywhere else in the world that we knew of. The problems of clustering that we discovered resulted in an overwhelming amount of team effort on the part of Marshall. And the final results showed how well the work was done."

Additionally, with the exception of the H-1 engine itself, the entire first Saturn launch vehicle was built here at Marshall. "I think this really showed the world what this organization could do through teamwork."

The flight was a splendid demonstration of the strength of our national space program and an important milestone in the buildup of our national capacity to launch heavy payloads," James E. Webb, NASA administrator at the time of the launch, said in a statement released following the test.

The rocket flew as programmed. The trajectory reached 84 miles altitude and extended 200 miles out into the Atlantic; peak velocity of the craft was 3,607 miles an hour. Not much by today's performance standards, but a giant leap for Cluster's last stand and a monumental proof that would be many times duplicated. America did have a team which could develop, launch and expendable super-

rocket which could today

Clean Air Coalition proposes solutions to acid rain problem

The National Wildlife Federation, on behalf of the National Clean Air Coalition, has proposed a four-point plan to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions in 31 states in order to begin solving the nation's growing acid rain problem. The plan was outlined by Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the NWF, at a House Energy and Commerce Committee hearing on acid rain.

The NWF is a member of the National Clean Air Coalition whose members include conservation, health, labor and consumer groups interested in educating the public about the dangers of air pollution.

The Coalition plan recommends that Congress mandate a ten-million ton per year reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions in 31 eastern states by 1990.

Hair noted that sulfur dioxide emissions should be dealt with first because they are responsible for "up to 80 percent of the acid precipitation in the northeast."

When sulfur dioxide emissions, mainly generated by coal-burning power plants, combine with rain or snow they form an acid which is often blown hundreds of miles from its actual source before it falls to earth.

Acid rain has killed the fish in more than 90 lakes in the Adirondack Mountains, and a recent NFW report revealed that 15 eastern states are "extremely vulnerable" to the harmful effects of acid rain. (Mississippi was listed as "moderately vulnerable" in the survey.)

Under the plan Hair outlined, Congress would set a formula which would allow utilities in the 31 eastern states to apportion fairly among themselves the burden of a ten million ton sulfur dioxide reduction.

Each sulfur dioxide generator subject to the reduction requirements would be given up to two years to submit a reduction proposal to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Utilities, which account for about three-quarters of all sulfur dioxide emissions in the eastern U.S., would be allowed to "trade" emission reduction obligations among themselves and non-utility plants. Although EPA would have final approval of the utilities' reduction plans, the states should have an active role in enforcing the plans.

Hair expressed strong support for an acid rain bill — S. 1706 — recently introduced by Sen. George Mitchell (D-Maine), and for similar legislation to be introduced by Rep. Toby Moffett (D-Conn.).

In calling for effective acid rain control legislation, Hair said, the NWF, the nation's largest conservation organization, is in the company of the bipartisan National Commission on Air Quality, the prestigious National Academy of Sciences, and the 88 percent of the American People — whom we all represent — who have indicated their support for a strong Clean Air Act.

Winter causes increase in home chimney fires

Home fires caused by chimney fires are expected to increase in Mississippi with colder weather.

Chimney fires start when flammable creosote and soot deposits in flues and chimneys are ignited.

"By all means, avoid a chimney fire. Do not use the old-fashioned practice of burning the creosote out of the flue," says Dannie Reed, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service farm safety specialist.

"Heaters, flue pipes and chimneys are not designed and built to withstand chimney fires. They are designed only for normal to high heat output situations." After a chimney fire, extensive repair usually is required, and smoke or fire may have damaged the home.

Reed recommends cleaning the chimney thoroughly before each heating season. Inspect it and clean it afterwards when creosote deposits around the sides of the chimney reach one-fourth inch anywhere in the chimney. This may range from monthly to longer.

Signs of chimney fire are billowing smoke from the chimney, crackling and popping inside the flue pipe, a roaring noise, and a whistling of air into the heater or cracks of the flue as the draft increases, sounding like wind blowing up the flue.

If you have a heat buildup in the chimney and signs of a chimney fire, call the fire department. Close down dampers on the wood heater or close fireplace doors.

Discharge a fire extinguisher into the heater or fire place, if you have one. In any commercial fire extinguishing material company have one or three and one-half gallon and a close the heater or fireplace doors.

Discharge water into the intake on down the flue, if you can, to dampen the fire. Do not use water on the heater or fireplace doors.

When you have the fire under control, prepare to move down the chimney. If the framing that may be exposed to smoke and burn, do not enter the chimney. Call the fire department for assistance.

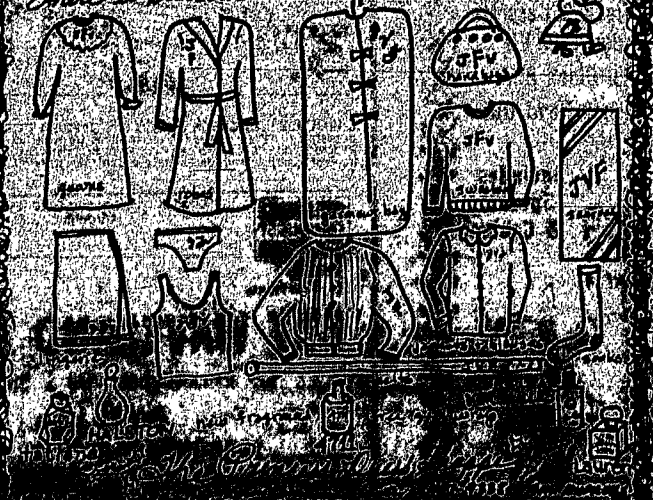

IQ cards must be returned

By ELLIS CUEVAS
Veterans and dependents who receive Veterans Administration pension checks and received Income Questionnaire cards with their Nov. 1 checks are reminded that these cards must be returned, says Mike Ladner, Hancock County veterans service officer.

Ladner reports: "If you need help in completing the IQ card please contact me at my office and I will help you. The cards must be returned to the VA Processing Center, P. O. Box 7420, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101 by Dec. 31 in order for the veterans and dependents to receive their January 1982 VA pension checks."

Ladner emphasizes that it is important for the IQ cards to be handled properly and as soon as possible.

The service officer on Tuesday was visited by Carroll Davis, service officer of the State Veterans Affairs Commission.

Late in the second quarter of a Bay High School Tiger Basketball game the Tigers scored 13 unanswered points to take a commanding lead over the St. Stanislaus Rock's Chews which lasted until the final 61-48 score.

During most of the first half play at St. Stanislaus both teams seemed evenly matched, with Stanislaus ahead near the end of the second period by a score of 16-15.

But the Tiger scoring scored during the last 10 minutes of the game as the Rocks could not make up the 13 point difference by the end of the game.

Darrell Robinson leading the Tiger with 14 points, followed by Shannon Carr with 11 and Bill Wain with 10. The Rocks were led by Mike Carr with 12 points and Stan Carr with 10. The game was a variety game between the two teams, with the lead continually changing hands early in the contest. Bay High won by a 61-48 margin.

Jackson to host Boise

When Jackson State University defeated Alcorn State 13-10 on Thanksgiving Day, it wrapped up for the Tigers their first outright Southwestern Athletic Conference Championship since 1962.

The Tigers have won a share of the SWAC title four times since 1962. The win over Alcorn also gave the Tigers an automatic bid to this year's NCAA Division I-AA Playoffs.

The 9-1-1 Tigers, by virtue of their fourth place finish in the Division I-AA poll, will host last year's national champions Boise State in a first round game Saturday at Mississippi Memorial Stadium with the kickoff set for 1:30 p.m.

Other first round games in the eight team playoffs are Delaware at Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee State at South Carolina State and Rhode Island at Idaho State. The winner of the Jackson State-Boise State game will play the winner of the Eastern Kentucky-Delaware game on Dec. 12.

Saturday's game will be the first meeting between Jackson State and Boise State. It won't, however, be the first time that the Broncos have played a SWAC team. Last year Boise defeated Grambling in the first round of the Division I-AA Playoffs and went on to defeat Eastern Kentucky for the national championship.

Boise State, who finished second to Idaho State in the Big Sky Conference with a 6-1 league record, is a well-balanced team that runs primarily from the power and power formations. The Broncos are averaging better than 30 yards per game and have yielded 317 yards defensively.

Saturday's game will mark the second appearance in the Division I-AA Playoffs for JSU. The Tigers made their first appearance in 1978 losing to Florida A and M in Mississippi Memorial Stadium, 15-10.
